Forecast for Sunday 18 Oct 2020

Weather: In the east rather cloudy initially with some patchy light rain cropping up. Further west starting dry with some limited clear spells and perhaps a few fog patches in the valleys. Brighter spells gradually increasing mid to late morning across the Park, then with the flow backed to the southwest cloud gradually building from the west, bringing some patchy light rain during the evening, which merges into longer spells of rain towards midnight, chiefly across western peaks.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 600m: Initially in the east and later in the day in the west 25% with bases quite extensive from 450-650m, otherwise 75%.

Visibility: Mainly good. In rain becoming 3-8km, poor in hill fog.
